The Nation's #1 Financing Program For Veterans & Their Families Who Own a Business

When veterans of the armed forces transition back into civilian lives, many opt to become entrepreneurs. They bring to their endeavors the leadership, team support and solid work ethics they learned while in the military.

In developing business savvy, they usually turn to their banks for financial support. What they often encounter is a roadblock. Banks do not offer funding often—especially small business loans to veterans with poor credit or financial histories.

We Believe in Giving Back.

To help give back to Our Nation's Finest, the Expert Advisors at National created the Veteran Business Loan Program: specialized financing that helps veterans and their families gain easier access to financing.

Our Expert Advisors are proud to fight for veterans and their families by eliminating paperwork, simplifying the application process, cutting the funding process down to hours, and providing live 24/7 assistance from start to finish.

Veterans deserve only the best when seeking to grow and improve their businesses, and we aim to help. National's Expert Advisors are dedicated to helping our country's veterans by making funding their small businesses the easiest and fastest process possible - and always with the utmost respect and compassion.

Government Funding for Veterans Vs. The Veteran Business Loan Program

Government Funding Programs for Veterans

The Office of Veterans Business Development (OVBD)—an extension of the government’s Small Business Administration (SBA)—offers two major funding programs for veteran-owned businesses.

1. SBA Loans from The Office Of Veterans Business Development (OVBD):

With low prime rates, and a guarantee from the Federal Government, veteran SBA loans are among the most common funding options sought by veteran business owners.

However, the vast majority of veterans can’t meet the extreme approval qualifications required for SBA funding, including a near-perfect credit score and spotless financial history.

Together with the enormous amount of paperwork needed, and wait times to SBA funds that can span upwards of six months or more, SBA funding from the OVBD often winds up to be the slowest, least convenient, and highest cost of capital funding option on the market for veteran entrepreneurs.

2. Government Grants From the US Department of Veterans Affairs (VA):

Whereas loans are required to be repaid, veterans do not need to repay funding from government grants. The VA offers such grants for veteran business owners, who face fierce competition in obtaining them.

Government grants for veteran business owners are far and few between. With new veteran business grants becoming available all the time, and given away to a select few among thousands of applicants, veterans cannot rely on grants as a consistent source of business funding.

To offer an easier, faster alternative for veterans and their families, National offers simplified qualifications, faster processing, less paperwork, and live 24/7 access to an Expert Advisor. The Veteran Business Loan Program includes a vast variety of great financing options for veterans and their families with lower rates, larger amounts, and better terms that perfectly match every business need.

Below are the top three financing options among 12+ chosen by veterans and their families to help grow their businesses.

Government Funding for Veterans Vs. The Veteran Business Loan Program

Business Loans For Veterans With Bad Credit

Many recently retired service members simply don't have access to the time or resources needed to boost their FICO making access to the same great business loans for veterans with bad credit incredibly difficult.

Fortunately, bad credit business loans for veterans are no longer out of reach. National has a large variety of funding products with excellent terms that are available to veterans and their relatives of all credit profiles and financial histories.

Business Funding For Disabled Veterans

Disabled veterans that own businesses tend to have a lot of difficulty getting the funding they need, compared to most business owners.

Many of these disabled service members simply don't have time to boost their credit scores or annual sales upon returning home. After medical expenses and readjustment to civilian life, many disabled veterans cannot qualify for the financing they need.

Fortunately, alternative business financing companies like National offer small business financing options specialized to make access to capital easier and faster for disabled veterans, as their way of giving back to those who gave everything for our freedom.

I'd like to thank National for the level of effort, coordinated communication and understanding support they showed over the last week. As a small business owner and disabled Veteran, it is a breath of fresh air to deal with such responsive customer needs-oriented personnel. Specifically, I'd like to point out how much of a true resource their Business Growth Advisors are to the organization. Their respect, courtesy and true professionalism during our funding issues were much appreciated. They will be the first call I make for any future funding needs of my company and will be recommended to all of my small business partners for their needs as well.
